

Instructor: Date:

Learner: Regional Branch:

Program: Center:

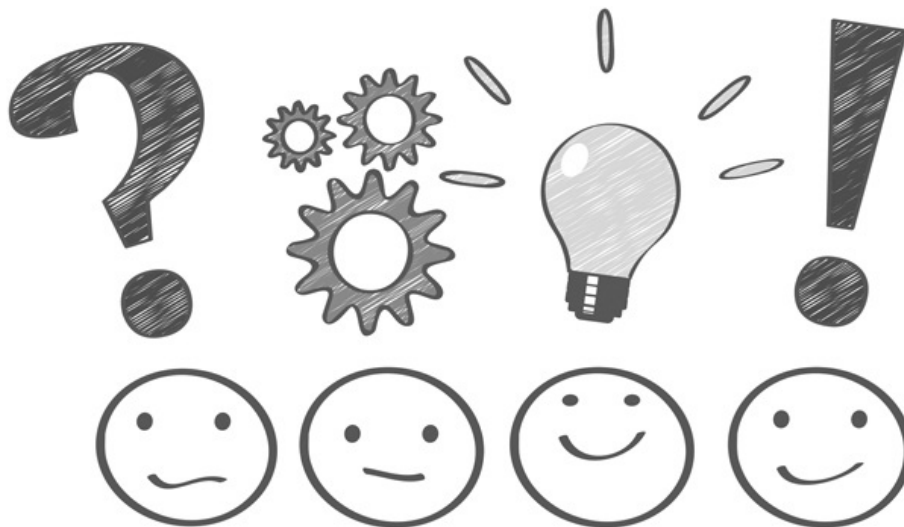

CONTENT

- Let's Start! • Let's Explore! • Let's Practice! • Extension Activity • Target Words • Learning Points

Let's Start!

Let's review!

Learning Outcome

Describe emotions and feelings in present and past situations in spoken or written texts and in work and social contexts.

Ask your partner:

- What is your idea of good communication?
- Is it easy for you to communicate well? Why? Why not?

Can Do Statements

- I can talk about what happens in general or what happens in a specific situation using if.
- I can discuss what might have happened, what will have happened, what must have happened.
- I can talk about the purpose of an action or an event.

Let's Explore!

Were they giving each other looks?

* To "give each other looks" means to express something to someone with your face.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

- Bill: It must have been difficult to pull that off, Vanessa.
- Vanessa: Well I didn't get much sleep, but I was eager to finish my course and get the restaurant management certificate. Now my goal is to improve customer relations and be a fair and caring manager.
- Bill: You've been held accountable for everything at Bistro 88 lately, and it can't have been easy. You've also had a lot of repeat business. When I was manager I hated dealing with complaints and reprimanding the servers and I may have been too distracted to manage properly. If you are too relaxed, they take advantage of you. The customer complaints were also difficult to take.
- Vanessa: Agreed. When I began to be more aware of the way I was presenting myself to the servers, I realized my non-verbal communication was the problem. I was really stressed and closed. It could have been a cultural bias too, in a way. Because I'm British, I might have seemed a little cold at times. Now I am always double-checking with the servers in order to really find out what the issues are. I think the success of the restaurant hinges on clear communication between everyone, including the staff and the customers. If you communicate clearly and honestly, it makes everything easier.
- Bill: True. If you listen well too, people respond more honestly. Communication is always a challenge. I think you have the right attitude and personality to manage people. More wine?
- Vanessa: Oh yes, just a little more, please. What about you Bill? Do you intend to invest in any other projects?
- Bill: Not for the moment. If this trip goes well, I'll come back with some ideas. I hope to get inspired when I'm in the Maldives. What about you Vanessa? Do you intend to do any traveling in the near future, now that you have two weeks vacation?
- Vanessa: Sure do! If you have any spectacular meals, will you get the recipes?
- Bill: It would be my pleasure. Maybe you and I could think about opening a different kind of restaurant one day.

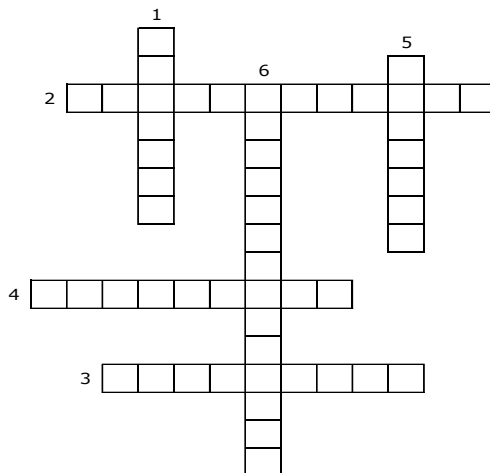

Let's Practice!

Bill and Vanessa like talking about customer relations.

Instructions: Use the clues to correctly complete the crossword.

Down

1. You use this verb in order to show you accomplish something in spite of difficulties or obstacles. (2 words)
5. You use this verb in order to express a similar meaning to the verb depend on. (2 words)
6. You use this expression with the aim of talking about customers who return because of the good products or services that he received. (2 words)

Across

2. You use this expression to show that you interpret something in one culture with the standards of your own culture. (2 words)
3. You use this verb to mean giving someone a severe talk because of something that was done in a wrong way.
4. This is the kind of communication for expressing something with gestures, without words.

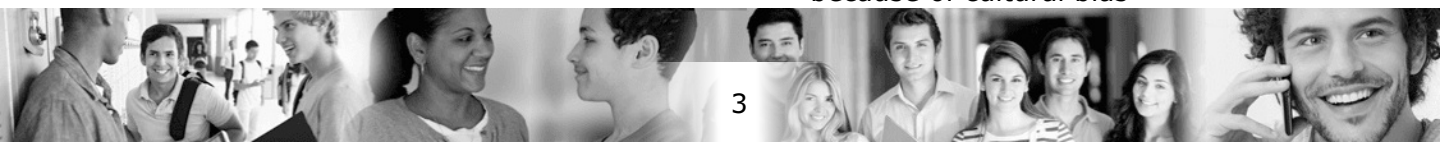

Let's Practice!

Vanessa and Bill must have shared lots of good times together!

Instructions: Read again the dialogue on page 2 to answer correctly the following questions.

1. Which of these ideas are true, based on the conversation?
 - ☐ Bill thinks Vanessa must have had a hard time to solve the situation.
 - ☐ Bill thinks Vanessa must not have had a hard time to solve the situation.
 - ☐ Vanessa expects to have become a good manager soon.
 - ☐ Vanessa expects to have gotten her management certificate soon.
 - ☐ Vanessa hopes to have helped improve customer relations soon.
2. Which of these ideas are not true, based on the conversation?
 - ☐ Vanessa could have had trouble with customers because of non-verbal communication.
 - ☐ Vanessa could not have had trouble with customers because of non-verbal communication.
 - ☐ Vanessa might have seemed too friendly sometimes.
 - ☐ Vanessa must not have had trouble because cultural bias.
 - ☐ Vanessa could have had trouble because of cultural bias.

Extension Activity

Create a questionnaire.

Instructions: Complete the following steps. Fill in the Self-Assessment.

- With a partner, think of at least 10 questions to create a questionnaire about customer service.
- Make sure the questions focus on the relationships among management with staff, and staff with clients.
- Make sure you use at least one or two sentences using first conditional in the questions.
- Ask 5 or more people to complete your questionnaire.
- Discuss the results keeping in mind similarities and differences in the responses.

Self-Assessment

Yes

No

I create a questionnaire with a partner.

☐ ☐

I use a few first conditional questions.

☐ ☐

I have people answer the questions on the questionnaire.

☐ ☐

I discuss the results of the questionnaire.

☐ ☐

Target Words

- to pull something off (verb): to make something work
e.g. It must have been difficult to pull that off.
- customer relations (noun): the relationship a business has with its clients or customers including good communication and customer satisfaction e.g. Now my goal is to improve customer relations.
- to be held accountable (verb): to be responsible for e.g. You've been held accountable for everything at Bistro 88 lately.
- to reprimand (verb): to criticize or admonish for bad behaviour e.g. When I was manager I hated dealing with complaints and reprimanding the servers.
- non-verbal communication (noun): transferring of information through body language e.g. I realized my non-verbal communication was the problem.
- cultural bias (noun): interpretation and judgement based on someone's background, nationality, race e.g. It could have been a cultural bias too in a way because I'm British.
- to hinge on (verb): to depend on e.g. I think the success of the staff and restaurant hinges on clear communication between everyone including the staff and the customers.
- repeat business (noun): regular business from the same customers
e.g. You've also had a lot of repeat business.

Learning Points

Zero and First Conditional - Review

The Zero Conditional is used to talk about what you usually do in real-life situations. The result of the condition is always true according to the initial situation. You use the First Conditional with if clauses to exchange opinions about possible future outcomes.

The Zero Conditional, also called the Present Real Conditional uses the following structure:
If/when ... Simple Present, ... Simple Present or
 Simple Present ... if/when ... Simple Present.

Both if and when are used in the Present Real Conditional. Using if suggests that something happens less frequently. Using when suggests that it is fairly certain the condition will be fulfilled.

You use the First Conditional to say it's possible that you will or will not do something. In that condition, something else may, may not, will, or will not happen. The outcome is not in the present, but in the future.

Structure:

If + Present Simple ... will + verb ...

or will + verb + if + Present Simple

If people overeat, they become overweight.

If it rains on Saturday, I will stay home and watch a movie.

Examples:

- If you are too relaxed, they take advantage of you.
- If you communicate clearly and honestly, it makes everything easier.
- If you listen well too, people respond more honestly.
- If this trip goes well, I'll come back with some ideas.
- If you have any spectacular meals, will you get the recipes?

Perfect Infinitives - Review

You use the Perfect Infinitive to talk about an action that will be completed at a point in the future.

The Perfect Infinitive can refer to an action that was completed, or that was expected to be completed at some point in the past.

You use the Perfect Infinitives with modals must, might, could, may and can't to express a deduction or disbelief about something in the present or the past.

Learning Points

The modal you choose depends on the level of probability you want to express.

The Perfect Infinitive can refer to an action that will be completed, or that is expected to be completed at some point in the future.

You use the Perfect Infinitive to talk about future actions with verbs like expect, pretend, prefer, or hope.

Example:

She expects to have it done by 10 tonight.

You use the Perfect Infinitive to talk about past actions with verbs like expect, pretend, prefer, or hope.

Example:

She expected to have contacted everyone by the end of the evening.

You use the Perfect Infinitive with non-finite clauses to refer to events that have happened in the past, or events that should or might have happened but did not happen in the end. A non-finite clause is introduced by a verb with no subject.

Example:

To have pulled that off is impressive.

You use must for logical conclusions. There is a strong degree of certainty about the present situation.

You use may, might and could to express a deduction about things in the present or the past when there are other possibilities or when the situation is possible but not certain. These modals have the same meaning.

You use can't when the situation is impossible or to express disbelief.

Structure:

modal verb + have + past participle

Examples:

- It must have been difficult to pull that off.
- I may have been too distracted to manage properly.
- Because I'm British I might have seemed a little cold at times.
- You've been held accountable for everything at Bistro 88 lately and it can't have been easy.

