

Instructor: Date:

Learner: Regional Branch:

Program: Center:

CONTENT

- Let's Start! • Let's Explore! • Let's Practice! • Extension Activity • Target Words • Learning Points

Let's Start!

Tell someone about the day you've had.

Learning Outcome

Describe emotions and feelings in present and past situations in spoken or written texts and in work and social contexts.

Can Do Statements

- I can express annoyance.
- I can discuss different solutions to a problem.
- I can explain my opinion, and make and refuse polite requests using if.

Ask your partner:

- What was one of the worst days you had at school or work?
- How do you deal with stress at work or at school?

Let's Explore!

Vanessa lets off some steam about her rough day!

* "To let off steam" means to release anger.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

Amy: Good to see you Vanessa. How was work?

Vanessa: Thanks! I am totally wiped out. Again. I'm really fed up with it! Today I felt like I was a therapist, a police officer, a nurse and a costume designer. First of all, I am worried about Rachel, who was off today. She hasn't been very team-oriented lately and she has been telling me some disturbing things, in confidentiality, of course. She could be having mental health problems. She needs help. I won't put up with it if she brings her issues into the dining room. In the morning, Michael sliced his hand open and I needed to bandage him up. Then Alexander tried to tell the homeless guy, Burt, to get off the front step and Burt, who's full of hate and discrimination, punched him! Somehow I managed to convince Burt to calm down and go sit somewhere else before things got even uglier. I also think Alexander may be in some trouble with the police ... which is very irritating! Oh, and one of the new servers was wearing this totally inappropriate shirt, so I had to talk to her about her appearance and fashion a new outfit out of clothing from the closet. It even required a bit of sewing, for God's sake! Meanwhile I was trying to be mindful and trying to communicate openly ... but honestly I think I've had enough of it!

Amy: It sounds like a lot to deal with. You must be worn out. If you have time will you join me for some meditation tomorrow night? You might want to keep as level-headed and calm as possible.

Vanessa: Yes. I'll come and meditate if I finish work before five. I should be able to leave at a reasonable time.

Amy: If you don't leave by five, I will come over there and force you to leave. Remember the work/life balance? If you won't take time for yourself, you'll have a nervous breakdown.

Vanessa: Yes. I know. Will you always remind me to keep calm if I appear to need reminding?

Amy: You can bet on it!

Let's Practice!

Vanessa talks about her feelings at work.

Instructions: Match the sentences on the left with their missing parts on the right.

COLUMN A

1. I won't put up with it
2. If you have time, will you join me
3. I'll come and meditate if
4. If you don't leave by five,
5. If you won't take time for yourself,
6. Will you always remind me to keep calm

COLUMN B

- a. if she brings issues into the dining room.
- b. I finish work before five.
- c. you'll have a nervous breakdown.
- d. if I appear to need reminding?
- e. I will come over there and force you to leave.
- f. for some meditation tomorrow night?

Let's Practice!

Amy gives some advice about how to solve Vanessa's problems.

Instructions: Unscramble the words in order to find the mystery sentences.

1. be having mental health could problems. She

2. Alexander in the trouble may with be police.

3. must worn You be out.

4. as possible. might keep to level-handed want as You

Extension Activity

Speculate about a friend.

Instructions: Complete the following steps. Fill in the Self-Assessment.

- Imagine your friend has come home late from work with a torn shirt and a couple of bandages, looking exhausted and feeling hungry and thirsty.
- Speculate what might/may/could/can't have happened to him/her.
- Compare your ideas with a partner and see if you can come up with some more ideas.

Self-Assessment

Yes

No

I imagine a situation.

☐ ☐

I speculate about the situation.

☐ ☐

I compare my speculations with a partner.

☐ ☐

Target Words

- to be wiped out (expression): to be exhausted
e.g. I am totally wiped out.
- team-oriented (adjective): putting the interests of the group first e.g. She hasn't been very team-oriented lately.
- confidentiality (noun): a state of secrecy
e.g. She has been telling me some disturbing things, in confidentiality, of course.
- to bandage (verb): to bind a wound in protective material e.g. Michael sliced his hand open and I needed to bandage him up.
- discrimination (noun): unfair treatment especially on the grounds of race, age, or sex e.g. Burt is full of hate and discrimination and he punched him!
- to get ugly (expression): to become worse
e.g. Somehow I managed to convince Burt to calm down and go sit somewhere else before things got even uglier.
- inappropriate (adjective): not suitable or proper in the circumstances
e.g. One of the new servers was wearing this totally inappropriate shirt, so I had to talk to her about her appearance.
- worn out (adjective): extremely tired; exhausted
e.g. It sounds like a lot to deal with. You must be worn out.

Learning Points

Must, Might, Could, May, and Can't* to Speculate About the Present

You use the modals must, might, could, may and can't to speculate or make guesses about something in the present. The modal you choose depends on the level of probability you want to express.

You use must for logical conclusions. There is a strong degree of certainty about the present situation.

You use may, might and could to speculate about things in the present when there are other possibilities or when the situation is possible but not certain. These modals have the same meaning.

You use can't when the situation is impossible.

Look at the chart for the use of modals to speculate about the present.

Level of certainty	Modal	Example
almost certain	must	You must be worn out.
it's possible	might could may	Alexander may be in trouble with the police.
it's very unlikely	can't	This can't be true!

Examples:

- She could be having mental health problems.
- You might want to keep as level-headed and calm as possible.

Learning Points

Will and Won't in the if clause is used to show polite request or refusal

Use the first conditional to talk about the possibility of things happening in the present or the future.

You use the if clause with Will and Won't to express polite request or refusal.

A sentence using the first conditional is made up of two clauses, an if clause and a main clause:

I'll come by and help if I stop work before 6. = It's possible that I can come by and help on the condition that I leave work before 6.

Will and won't are sometimes used in the if clause in the following situations:

Refusal (won't)

Polite request (will)

Strong objection at doing something (will)

Use	Example
Refusal	If you won't take time off for yourself, you'll have a nervous breakdown.
Request	If you'll agree to give me time off, I'll be able to de-stress a little.
Strong objection	If you will drive so fast, you can expect to get a fine or two.

Examples:

- If you have time, will you join me for some meditation tomorrow night?
- Yes. I'll come and meditate if I finish work before five.
- I won't put up with it if she brings her issues into the dining room.

