

Instructor: Date:

Learner: Regional Branch:

Program: Center:

CONTENT

- Let's Start! • Let's Explore! • Let's Practice! • Extension Activity • Target Words • Learning Points

Let's Start!

We did everything together!

Learning Outcome

Understand actions, events, and experiences in present, past or future and in spoken or written texts and in work and social contexts.

Can Do Statements

- I can talk about relationships and character traits.
- I can talk about unfulfilled plans in the past.
- I can refer to present or past action.

Ask your partner:

- What did you and your school friends do in your spare time when you were young?
- How much time did you spend together?
- What one special event do you remember?

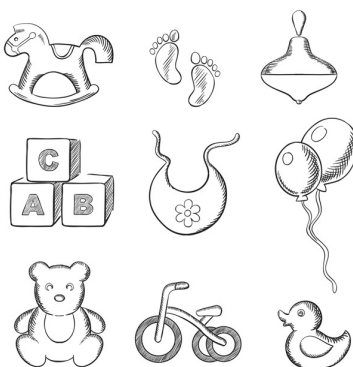

Let's Explore!

Dillinger foiled the police in the Bohemia blunder.

* A "blunder" is a huge mistake.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

Back in '33, Grandad was just a child in school. To tell you the truth, he was actually quite lucky, because his parents were fortunate to still have some money. They didn't have enough money to have been rich by any means, but in those days, it wasn't unheard of to have lost your entire life's savings.

People found that banks had gone broke by the dozen. In the evenings the grown-ups talked about families they said had lost their homes that day. The banks, they thought, were to blame for everybody's unhappiness.

One spring morning after he brought in the paper, they found that yet another bank had been robbed, and in plain daylight! Grandad would soon come to know the bank robber well. John Herbert Dillinger was his name. He and his friends found that reading about the robberies helped them pass the time. He admitted that from the start they had devoured every story that was published about Dillinger and his gang.

His parents said that the way he had eagerly awaited the morning paper to see if perhaps another robbery had been committed, was shameful. Grandad followed Dillinger's movements on a map and was known to have cheered him on each time he dodged the law. They had made lists of the hotels where he stayed, and of the police officers who had lamented their unlucky misses.

The most exciting Dillinger exploit was the Bohemia blunder. Dillinger and the gang, needing rest and relaxation, turned up at the Little Bohemia Lodge. The owners were glad to have gotten the business, but terrified to have discovered who their guests actually were. The papers reported that the lady of the house had snuck out a letter alerting the FBI. Agents assembled and surrounded the buildings! Then, they heard dogs barking. By the time they got into the building, they discovered that Dillinger had escaped with five of his gang members.

When Grandad and his friends read the account of Bohemia blunder, they all breathed a sigh of relief. Dillinger had outwitted the authorities once again. The adventure was to continue!

Let's Practice!

Grandad talks about his fascination with Dillinger.

Instructions: Mark all the correct answers. Read the sentences aloud. Check your pronunciation with your instructor.

Which of the following sentences are grammatically correct?

1. ___ People found that banks has gone broke by the dozen.
2. ___ In the evenings the grown-ups talked about families they said had lost their homes that day.
3. ___ He have admitted that from the start they had devoured every story that was published about Dillinger and his gang.
4. ___ His parents said he had eagerly awaited the morning paper to see if perhaps another robbery had been committed.
5. ___ Grandad followed Dillinger's movements on a map and was known to have cheered him on each time he is dodged the law.
6. ___ They had made lists of the hotels where he stayed, and of the police officers who had lamented their unlucky misses.
7. ___ The papers reported that the lady of the house, had snuck out a letter alerting the FBI.
8. ___ Agents is assembled and surrounded the buildings!
9. ___ By the time they got into the building, they discovered that Dillinger had escaped with five of his gang members.

Let's Practice!

Grandad really admires Dillinger.

Instructions: Circle the correct option to complete the sentence.

1. His parents were fortunate to still _____ some money.
a. had b. have c. has
2. He had eagerly awaited the morning paper _____ if perhaps another robbery had been committed.
a. and seeing b. to see c. have seen
3. It wasn't unheard of to _____ your entire life's savings.
a. has losing b. have loss c. have lost
4. Grandad was known _____ him on.
a. to have cheered b. have cheering c. to be cheer
5. They were terrified _____ who their guests actually were.
a. to discovers b. to have discovered c. has been discovering

Extension Activity

Ask about things people did when they were children.

Instructions: Complete the following steps. Fill in the Self-Assessment.

- Make a list of wh- questions to ask someone about their childhood.
- Find out who they spent time with, where, when and what they did.
- Write some follow up questions to make sure you get a lot of information.
- Ask someone the questions and write down notes as they answer.
- Use your notes to tell another person what the person you interviewed did when they were a child.

Self-Assessment

Yes No

I make a list of wh- questions to ask someone about their childhood.

☐ ☐

I write follow up questions to get more information.

☐ ☐

I interview someone and take notes.

☐ ☐

I retell what I was told using the notes.

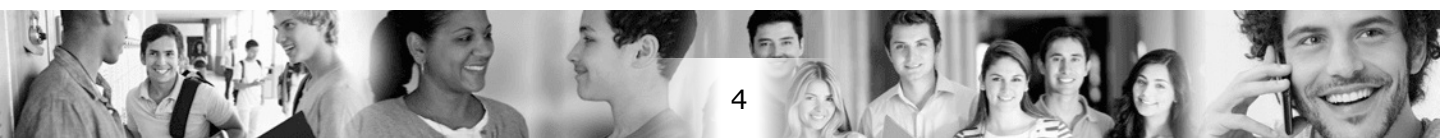

☐ ☐

I use the Simple Past and Past Perfect tenses.

☐ ☐

Target Words

- to be unheard of (expression): very unusual or has never happened before e.g. It wasn't unheard of to have lost your entire life's savings.
- to blame (verb): to assign responsibility for a fault or wrong
e.g. The banks, they thought, were to blame for everybody's unhappiness.
- shameful (adjective): worthy of or causing shame or disgrace e.g. His parents said that the way he had eagerly awaited the morning paper to see if perhaps another robbery had been committed, was shameful.
- to lament (verb): to mourn a person's loss or death
e.g. They had made lists of the hotels where he stayed, and of the police officers who had lamented their unlucky misses.
- exploit (noun): a brave, interesting, or unusual act
e.g. The most exciting Dillinger exploit was the Bohemia blunder.
- to breathe a sigh of relief (expression): to be relieved because something bad is no longer likely to happen.
e.g. When Grandad and his friends read the account of the Bohemia blunder, they all breathed a sigh of relief.
- to outwit (verb): to get an advantage over someone by acting more cleverly and often by using a trick
e.g. Dillinger had outwitted the authorities once again.

Learning Points

The Past Perfect vs. The Simple Past

You use the Past Perfect to report what people said. When people say something using either the Present Perfect or Simple Past, you need to change those tense to the Past Perfect when you report they have said or asked.

Refer to the chart for an outline of how these tenses change to the Past Perfect in reported speech.

Talking About a Past Event	Reporting This Past Event
"I have seen it before."	I was sure that I had seen it before.
"The city hasn't changed much."	I found that the city hadn't changed much.
"300 people survived the incident."	People said that 300 people had survived the incident.
"I stole the purse."	She admitted she had stolen the purse.

Examples:

- People found that banks had gone broke by the dozen.
- In the evenings the grown-ups talked about families they said had lost their homes that day.
- He admitted that from the start they had devoured every story that was published about Dillinger and his gang.
- His parents said that the way he had eagerly awaited the morning paper to see if perhaps another robbery had been committed, was shameful.
- Grandad followed Dillinger's movements on a map and was known to have cheered him on each time he dodged the law.
- They had made lists of the hotels where he stayed, and of the police officers who had lamented their unlucky misses.
- The papers reported that the lady of the house had snuck out a letter alerting the FBI.
- Agents assembled and surrounded the buildings!
- By the time they got into the building, they discovered that Dillinger had escaped with five of his gang members.

Learning Points

Perfect Infinitives vs. Infinitives

You know the infinitive as to + verb. You can sometimes use an infinitive without the to (bare infinitive). It depends on what verb precedes the infinitive.

Infinitives themselves do not change in meaning whether they are used in an active or passive way, or if they are used in different tenses. What is important is what verb you use them with - this will affect the tense of the infinitive.

Compare these two types of infinitives in their active and passive forms:

	Active	Passive
Simple Infinitive	to discover	to be discovered
Perfect Infinitive	to have discovered	to have been discovered

The Simple Infinitive refers to the same time as the verb which precedes it.

For example:

I was happy to meet her.

My daughter's teacher is said to be very strict.

The Perfect Infinitive refers to a time period before the preceding verb refers to.

For example:

I'm glad to have met her.

John was thought to have left earlier.

Examples:

- To tell you the truth, he was actually quite lucky.
- His parents were fortunate to still have some money.
- The banks, they thought, were to blame.
- He had eagerly awaited the morning paper to see if perhaps another robbery had been committed.
- The adventure was to continue!
- They didn't have enough money to have been rich.
- It wasn't unheard of to have lost your entire life's savings.
- Grandad would soon come to know the bank robber well.
- Grandad was known to have cheered him on.
- The owners were glad to have gotten the business.
- They were terrified to have discovered who their guests actually were.

